Yun Jiang appointed inaugural AIIA China Matters Fellow

The Australian Institute of International Affairs (AIIA) and China Matters are delighted to announce the appointment of Ms Yun Jiang as the inaugural AIIA China Matters Fellow.

Ms Jiang is co-founder and former editor of the newsletter China Neican. She is currently an editor of the China Story blog. She has published and been cited widely on China-related topics, with a focus on Australia's policies on the People's Republic of China. She is a former researcher in geoeconomics at the Australian National University and a former policy adviser in the Australian Government, having worked in the Department of the Prime Minister and Cabinet, the Treasury and the Department of Defence.

The AIIA China Matters Fellowship is an investment in the next generation of Australian China specialists. The Fellow, appointed for a two-year term, will publish well-researched and publicly accessible reports on developments in the PRC which are especially relevant to Australia. She will regularly publish opinion pieces in mainstream media and contribute in other ways to the public debate about the PRC and Australia-China relations.

The AIIA China Matters Fellowship was established to add depth and new insights to the vital debate about Australia's relationship with the PRC.

The Fellowship is funded entirely by donations from Australian citizens and from wholly Australian-owned and -controlled companies or foundations. All donors are listed on the websites of the AIIA and China Matters.

Yun Jiang can be contacted at: yun.jiang@anu.edu.au

For information about the Fellowship please contact AIIA President Allan Gyngell AO FAIIA (email: agyngell@gmail.com) or China Matters Deputy Chair Linda Jakobson FAIIA (email: linda.jakobson@chinamatters.org.au).
